Description:

The John Nesbit House at 41 North Main Street is a two-story tall, four-bay wide, two-bay deep, frame private residence constructed circa 1804 in a vernacular style. The dwelling, which sits on a brick foundation, consists of a rectangular side-gabled main block; a two-story rear ell; and a two-story side-gabled wing adjoining the ell to the northeast. The roof is sheathed with slate shingles and has molded wood eaves. An interior brick chimney is located at the southwest gable end of the main block. The exterior of the dwelling is clad in wood clapboard siding on all elevations. The front elevation has a two-story, semi-hexagonal projecting bay with two-over-two, double-hung, wood-sash windows with aluminum screen windows, molded lintels, and louvered shutters. Windows on the first floor are two-over-one, double-hung, replacement wood-sash windows with aluminum screen windows, molded lintels, and louvered shutters. The central entrance is a double-leaf, single-light wood door with molded hexagonal panels and a rectangular transom within a molded wood surround. A one-story porch with turned wood posts and a low railing with turned wood balusters shelters the north bays on the first floor. The porch terminates at a one-story, one-bay addition at the northeast corner of the dwelling; this addition is part of an earlier wraparound porch, now partially enclosed. The southwest elevation of the main block has two four-light fixed vinyl replacement windows in the gable end; a two-over-two, double-hung, wood-sash window on the second floor; and a two-over-one, double-hung, wood-sash window on the first floor. The rear ell has two-over-two, double-hung, wood-sash windows and a one-story, shed roof porch sheltering the first floor. The northeast elevation of the main block has two four-light fixed vinyl replacement windows in the gable end and a two-over-two, double-hung, wood-sash window on the second floor. The first floor of the one-story addition has two-over-one, double-hung, wood-sash windows with louvered shutters on either side of a single leaf door with a single light above a rectangular panel. This secondary entrance is sheltered by a one-story entry porch with cast iron posts and a concrete stoop with three brick steps. The two-story rear wing has a two-story, semi-hexagonal projecting bay in the east bay. All windows, including those on the projecting bay, are two-over-one, double-hung, wood-sash. Character-defining elements of the dwelling include the semi-hexagonal projecting bays and louvered shutters. A two-story, side-gabled frame barn (constructed circa 1910) stands at the rear of the property.

History: The John Nesbit House at 41 North Main Street first appears cartographically on the 1861 Walling map of Cranbury Township, owned by "J. Vanderveer." Vanderveer owned the subject dwelling through the end of the nineteenth century according to the 1872 Beers atlas and the 1876 Everts and Stewart map. The 1916 Sanborn map shows the subject dwelling as a two-story frame dwelling with a semi-hexagonal projecting bay, a two-story rear ell, a one-story wraparound front porch, and a one-story porch on the southwest elevation. Three frame outbuildings stood on the property; only one of these outbuildings survives today. The 1933 Sanborn map shows no changes to the property except for the removal of one of the frame outbuildings. Historic aerial photographs show that the two-story wing adjoining the rear ell was constructed circa 2001.
